

'Music on the Menu'

Hello schools, parents and carers,

Welcome to our fifteenth edition of Music on the Menu. We have included a selection of listening and viewing opportunities and a collection of music activities that you might like to explore in the classroom and at home.

Listening

Why not start the day by listening to beautiful music to calm and focus the mind?

Adagio for Strings

(Composer – Samuel Barber)

To Have a listen to this beautiful a cappella choral arrangement of the same piece, set to the 'Agnus Dei' text and performed by VOCES8.

Key Stage 1

YolanDa Brown explores various places to find items that could be turned into musical instruments. Watch the videos and see how her Mighty Music Makers take up YolanDa's challenge and create musical instruments with items found around school, in a market, at home and in an allotment.

These activities are a great way to get your children to be creative. Explore sounds around your environment with your children and create music. You can also download a 'How to make' guide and create even more homemade musical instruments such as: drums, tubular bells, a microphone and a guitar.

Key Stage 2

This week's song is I can see clearly now. This motivational song from the 1970s is about overcoming adversity and will leave you feeling sunny and positive. A teaching video is provided and there are also specially created activities to accompany the song.

Sing Up would love to hear how you're getting on, so tag them with #SingUpatHome.
